PROGRAM FUNDING BY SUBJECT

Start with Berkeley classrooms, add the support and resources of the community, and you create a catalyst that can change the educational experience of our students. From strengthening instruction through teacher professional development to enriching the school day with music, field trips, guest artists, and hands-on learning, Schools Fund donors are making an important difference for Berkeley schools and students.

With the support of our donors, last year the Schools Fund awarded grants to over half the teachers in the District, funded the highest number of Strategic Impact Grants, and strengthened our community partnerships, which bring the tremendous intellectual and cultural resources of our city into our classrooms. Working with UC students and professors, we provided a new crowdfunding site to Berkeley teachers, piloted a new science program for 7th graders, and placed nearly 250 UC student volunteers in our schools.

By providing funding to every school in the District through a lens of equity and excellence, Schools Fund donors are creating opportunity and raising the bar. We thank you for helping us inspire and empower an extraordinary public education for Berkeley schoolchildren and hope you will continue to support us.

IN DIRECT GRANTS &
PROGRAM SUPPORT

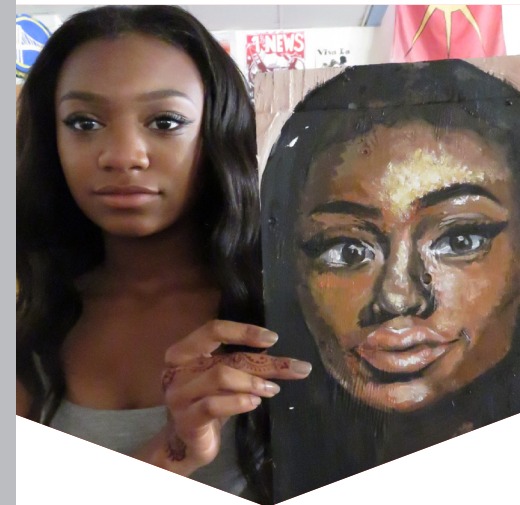

We started awarding classroom grants in 1986 to help teachers fulfill their goals for their classrooms, and today we're providing a range of grants that create more opportunities for funding and address broader needs and goals. With over half of BUSD teachers receiving grants plus an emphasis on supporting projects across the District, truly every student in Berkeley schools benefits from Schools Fund grants, made possible in 2014-15 by 1,457 individual donors.

In the last year, we launched the Friends & Family crowdfunding site, which gives teachers another option for funding at any time throughout the year. It gives community members the opportunity to provide direct contributions to projects that interest them and to connect to the exciting work happening in our schools. So far, teachers have used the site to grow their classroom libraries, fund field trips to the State Capital, buy equipment, and create activity areas in their classrooms—plus books, books, books! They're the kind of projects that teachers often pay for out of their own pockets, and we don't think they should.

In the past few years, our Strategic Impact grants have expanded. Teachers are utilizing these larger grants for collaborative and innovative projects, some of which are described in more detail on subsequent pages in this report. We awarded $146,455 for these grants supporting science, technology, teacher professional development, student support, music, and cooking and gardening across the District.

Lastly, teachers need to re-charge and continue their own educational journey; for the past few years we've offered Teacher Summer Fellowships to encourage teachers to broaden their personal and professional perspective with summer travel—because teachers need enriching experiences, too!

Community Partnership grants are under the umbrella of Strategic Impact Grants; these are long-standing partnerships between the Schools Fund and organizations that represent the outstanding intellectual and cultural resources in Berkeley.

This year we identified five organizations with which to permanently partner: the Berkeley Symphony, Community Resources for Science, the Berkeley Repertory Theatre, WriterCoach Connection, and Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory. The Schools Fund has supported the high-impact programs offered by these organizations for years (several of them for decades!); by identifying them as official Community Partners, we are ensuring their presence in classrooms for the foreseeable future. Each organization has a track record of providing programs that enhance and enrich the educational experience of our students.

These world-class Community Partners provide more individual instruction, broaden opportunities, and make Berkeley schools more equitable and extraordinary.

RAISED FOR THE WILLARD GARDEN

The Schools Fund awarded a Strategic Impact Grant for Be a Scientist, a new program bringing UC Berkeley science graduate students and post-docs to all 7th grade classes (piloted at King) to carry out individual scientific investigations of students' choosing. Students interacted with diverse, enthusiastic STEM role models and developed an understanding of the range of scientific and engineering fields. Teachers worked with UC scientists to teach critical thinking, problem solving, and communication skills, as well as an understanding of the scientific process and particular scientific content.

Allison Krasnow, the District Instructional Technology "Teacher on Special Assignment" received a Strategic Impact Grant for a Districtwide Summer "DigiTech" Institute organized by the BUSD technology department. Allison explains, "Too often, we send an individual teacher to professional development but don't build in time for him/her to collaborate with colleagues and truly integrate what was learned into their classrooms. Not only did this grant fund several teachers from every K-12 site to attend professional development for instructional technology, but it also built leadership at every site by having teachers present to their colleagues on what they had learned and gave time for teams from each site to collaborate."

Last year was an exciting year for Strategic Impact Grant awardee Growing Leaders, the program that teaches students gardening, cooking, and business skills and provides mentorship, internship, and summer job opportunities. To help fund the Willard gardening program, Growing Leaders partnered Willard and BTA students to sell meals twice a month to the local community. These dinners-to-go are sourced entirely from the Willard garden and neighboring businesses; all meals are cooked by students. The program teaches valuable business skills like invoicing, marketing, customer service, and inventory.

"In order to become a credentialed teacher in many states, and certainly in California, one must undergo a rigorous training program that requires at the outset a period of time devoted to volunteering in a public school classroom. To accrue this time at the very beginning of the scholastic process is in fact an arduous travail, as public schools are difficult to gain access to, and most teachers are hesitant if not resistant to the added distraction a volunteer often institutes. So, from the get-go, becoming a teacher is fraught with hurdles.

Berkeley Schools Volunteers (BSV) was my gateway through these hurdles, and besides the facility it grants in allowing parents and citizens to be contributing members of our educational system, it is an invaluable means of creating the teachers of the future. It is unique in its well-organized and systematic process, clean and clear in its implementation, and a boon to the long and strenuous road of teacher education. I should know; I joined the Volunteer program in 2011 with an eye to becoming an educator, and now here, in 2015, I am a new-hire teacher in Social Sciences at Berkeley High School. I will be ever devoted to and ever grateful for the provision this new role has blessed me with. And it all began for me as a volunteer."

Friends & Family Grants, the crowdfunding site for Berkeley teachers developed by the Schools Fund and Cal's software development group, Blueprint (pictured above), began its pilot period in June 2014 with an official launch in August 2014. Friends & Family uses the crowdfunding model, allowing donors to contribute directly to a teacher's idea and project.

This year we had 63 applications on the Friends & Family site. In its first "adoption" year, 22 grants were successfully funded, 32 failed to reach full funding, and several continue to seek funding. The successful grants raised over $28,500 from 275 donors. Survey comments described the site as a "great program" and "such a worthy endeavor!" Explore the site and donate to a project at the link below.
